

SRC Campaign Manifesto Naweed Otto

I'm not standing for SRC because I want a fancy title or to look good on posters. I'm standing because I've lived the student struggles that so many of us deal with daily. I know what it feels like to carry more than your share, to grind twice as hard and still feel like you're playing catch-up. I know what it feels like to feel unseen, like your voice doesn't reach the spaces where decisions are made.

That's why I'm running because we deserve an SRC that's real, that's present, and that actually cares. Too often it feels like students are spoken at, not spoken with. And honestly, that disconnect has gone on for too long.

I want an SRC that doesn't just sit in offices or release statements when things go wrong. I want one that shows up, that feels the pulse of campus, and that fights for fairness with the same energy we fight just to get through a semester.

For me, leadership has never been about titles. It's about service. It's about being the person people can rely on, even when it's tough, even when it's not glamorous. It's about taking the hits, standing your ground, and not backing down when students' futures are on the line.

If you give me your trust, I promise to push for:

- A student voice that's heard, not ignored. No decision about us should ever be made without us.
- Fairness in every corner of campus life. From funding to housing, no student should feel like the system is against them.
- Opportunities that prepare us for the real world. Because our degree must be a key that opens doors, not just a paper we struggle to use.
- A bridge between campus and community. What we do here must matter out there in our homes, our families, and the places we come from.

I know struggle. I know what it means to juggle more than feels possible. And because of that, I will never take this role lightly. This isn't about politics for me, it's personal. It's about making sure no student feels like they're carrying their load alone, the way I've felt before.

Vote for me, Naweed Otto, and let's build an SRC that doesn't just represent students on paper, but stands with them in reality. An SRC that feels like us.

Because leadership isn't about being above people it's about standing shoulder to shoulder with them.
